The Project Aims

to support the transfer of know-how about the European Union to German language and literacy courses for refugees and migrants and more generally to enrich the training offer for EU and project management trainings.

Learning Inside the Classroom

We called it the 'coordinator's budget soup'.

The project objectives are

- 1) to train adult education staff and trainers to use digital learning resources and tools in the area of European Union and EU project management learning from Brexit;
- 2) to support the learning and teaching of integration topics which have become an integral part in a growing number of German language classes;
- 3) to implement digital learning resources into eLearning environments and embed them into a broader strategy of Open Educational Resources.

Learning Outside the Classroom in London and Wales

The host organization Joanna Pinewood Education Limited from London also organized learning outside the classroom in the centre of London and in Wales at CAT – Centre for Alternative Technology.

The learning results were trialled in German language and literacy classes for asylum seekers and migrants in Austria. There is a growing need for trainers to implement also know-how about integration into the German language trainings.

German Language Training in London: What does Brexit mean for you?

Skills International GmbH held a German language training at the RMI hostel, which is a place for foreign young ladies to stay in London. It was a good chance to discuss with them what Brexit means to them – now and in the future.
